Bobles Little Fairy Tales

George Goodwin was a small boy, who lived in a large house with his father Mother and his brother John.

George was not a strong boy and often had to lay in bed a very long time. But the doctor said he was improving and if all went well would be able to walk and play this summer. John his brother stayed in the house with his brother and amused him and kept him company, for it was very tiresome laying in bed.

It was July and there were many flies in the house, despite the screen doors, ^{and} how careful every one was.

They flew about George and annoyed him. He was quite strong now and could go out sometimes and set on the porch. He looked at the flies and thought a minute, then he called his brother and told him to get a lot of little mach boxes he had been playing with.

John brought them and wanted to know what they were for, then George told him his plan. I am going to have a circus you run and get some bugs or flies to put in the boxes

Then George who liked drawing colored the boxes and put screen over some of them so he could see the animals

John captured. The name of the circus was to be Goodwin Bros.

John soon came in with a spider an ant and three caterpillars which he put in the boxes

Then he caught a lot of flies and a little green bug he had never seen before.

One day George was allowed to go out for a walk he found two fine big butterflies and one cricket and now that he was almost well he and John could find

The Three City Boys On a Hike.

by Ralph Ronald

NO 2

Second of Three City boys
Series

It was a bright June morning, the morning planned by Joe Ned and Tom for a hike into the country.

It was to be in the opposite direction of their new adventures.

Jim and Jack, and it was near a small lake, It was now eight o'clock and the three boys were at last ready, with a pack of lunch slung over their shoulders.

They all had wheels and the going was good. As they had to cross town before striking off for the lake they met many of their friends who wished to know where they were going.

But a small boy who was just leaving to ride an old wheel wished to come with them. The boys knew he would be tired out if he attempted the long ride.

but Peat refused to stay back and followed along after them. The boys began to race and left Peat away behind going so fast that he could not stop. He could not steer well and when he did stop it was in the ditch. He did not hurt himself but he had to walk all the way home on account of a puncture. The boys went along steadily for some time then Joe who was a little to the rear gave a yell and yelled "Help! Help!" Ned and Tom turned and saw Joe standing in the ditch with his wheel between him and what seemed to be an angry looking bulldog. Tom thought a minute and then called to Joe "your water gun! use your water gun!"

Joe quickly pulled out his gun and made ready for a quick push. The dog growled. The gun contained ammonia. Joe touched the air and
